Risky Business by Howard A. Dahl

What, according to Dahl are the two of the more important philosophical developments of American postmodernism?

What are the advantages and risks that these two philosophical developments present, both for business and for the Christian in business?

What question do most business people fail to ask? Is right and wrong important anymore?

Teaching God's Wrath by David Whitford

Why does the author say: "Without wrath there is no judgment, without judgment there is no hope"? Why must we understand that God is at times wrathful?

What would it mean if God were not wrathful in regard to sin?

What sorts of things make God angry? Why?

The author claims that not wrath, but indifference, is the opposite of love. What do you make of this?
